

HOUGHTON HOUSE.

W. M. WHITEHEAD having rented the above named house goes into the business with a full knowledge of the requirements of such an establishment. The structure being comparatively new, is in complete repair, and having been built especially for hotel purposes, is large, well arranged, and, with new furnishings, clean and inviting. Mrs. Whitehead, who stands at the head of the house-keeping department, sets a table whose excellence is unsurpassed, always supplied with the best the market affords. A corps of experienced cooks, and trained service in the dining hall elicit the praise of all persons so fortunate as to become guests of this house. Besides the large number of bedrooms and the beautifully furnished parlors, there is on the ground floor an excellent sample room devoted to the commercial traveler, and a comfortable office, where the proprietor stands ready to attend to all the wants, real or fancied, of his customers.
